

Cheryl D’Mello
Lecturer, English

Ms. D’Mello has a Master’s in English, a Master’s in Communication, and a Diploma in Journalism. Ms. D’Mello has taught Communication classes at Cleveland State University (CSU) and English Composition classes at the various campuses of Tri-C. She began as an adjunct in 2003, and went on to earn her second master’s at CSU in 2008. As a graduate assistant in the Office of Diversity and Multicultural Affairs at CSU, Ms. D’Mello was their writer and wrote about events and issues on and off campus. After a stint as a technical writer, she returned to teaching in 2013. Ms. D’Mello also has taught business and professional communication classes at CSU, John Carroll University and Tri-C’s Corporate College East and to students from China at CSU. Ms. D’Mello has published articles in a wide range of publications in India, the Middle East and in the U.S. on a variety of topics. Additionally, she has written for the Plain Dealer and other local publications, and served as Editor of The Lotus, the non-profit Asian Indian community newspaper in Cleveland for 2 years until October, 2019. Ms. D’Mello has lived in Cleveland since 2000, having immigrated from India in 1998. She, along with her husband, have traveled Merchant Navy ships to many countries, and often visits India.

Speech Topics:

Ms. D’Mello, who also teaches a class at Cleveland State University on East Asian Communication and Relationships, presents on the following topics:

Intercultural communication;

The Importance of Understanding the Differences between Eastern and Western Cultures

India, Indian culture, and the Indian diaspora

Asian Catholic Church

The Asian Diaspora

Last updated: March, 2020